Trim-Tex Drywall Artist of the Year 2006

Trim-Tex proudly presented Tom Sass with the 2006 Drywall Artist of the Year Award on June 11, 2007. Here is what the artist himself had to say:

If you could have only seen me when I won this award, you would know how ecstatic I was and just how much I appreciated this opportunity. Winning this award has classified me not only as a specialist, but the Drywall Artist of the Year! I guess it took winning a huge award like this to signify my talents. Now every job I go on people are asking me, 'Are you the guy that does the fancy drywall stuff?'

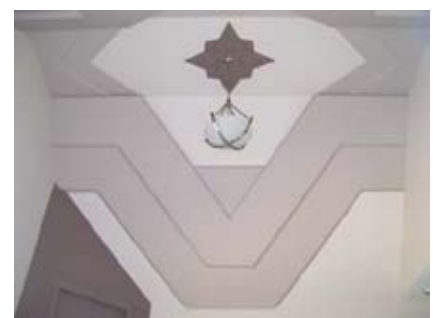

One of the many perks of winning this award was being invited to visit the Trim-Tex facility and meeting all of the staff members in Lincolnwood, IL. I had never met the owner of a worldwide company before and Trim-Tex's owner, Joe Koenig, is one of the most generous people I have ever met in my life. Joe took time out of his busy schedule to show me probably one of the best times of my life. That visit went way beyond any expectations I ever had! I am really jealous of the next person who wins this contest.

Winning this award has been the best word-of-mouth advertising campaign ever! In the home where I did the compass (left), the Interior Designer was blown away! She has been telling everybody about it. I gave her one of the brochures Trim-Tex provided to me that had a write up about me winning the 'greatest award ever,' along with some photos of my work. Using that brochure she gained three more jobs for me with a local architect who says he is looking forward to working with me.

It is absolutely amazing how much my business has changed since this award. Not only do customers come to me, they really listen to my ideas. As Trim-Tex comes up with new products like their Crown Molding and EZ Tray, my mind starts racing with unique ways to use them. Here is a glimpse of some of my recent projects.

Thanks again,
Tom Sass
